

Lesley Hall 1954 - 2013

Lesley Hall was a feminist and disability advocate who worked to empower low income and indigenous people, and people with disabilities, to attain and assert their human rights. She dramatically increased the policy involvement of people with disabilities in Australian and international disability issues.

Lesley Hall is well known for a radical form of activism in 1981, when she and other activists stormed the stage of the St Kilda Town Hall during the Miss Australia Quest. The act has been described as 'the first public act to place disability as a feminist issue on the agenda'.
